

Abstract

In a TDMA packet mobile communication system employing the concept of transport channels in a medium access control layer, an downlink access control signal, for identifying a destination mobile station, is inserted into each burst in a predetermined manner. .